HIV and aids concern all of us. Let’s protect ourselves by rejecting ignorance of HIV status, not the victims.

Land is our shared legacy

Thanks to the LCC, we get a land title together. It has both of our names on it.

The LCC guided us through the steps to have a notary add my name on the land title.

I followed the LCC advice. I got my own land title!

We are all equal. Let’s live together with respect for one another.

But we got married before the village chief! How can you treat me like this after all these years?

So what? According to the tradition, you don’t have rights! His estate is ours!

What about me? I am also a child of this family!

You have no business here!

You can’t inherit! If you want a house, just get married!

You are a woman! You can’t inherit! It is your fault if our brother is so sick!

So we will divide the estate between us three.

But we got married before the village chief! How can you treat me like this after all these years?

Plus it is your fault if our brother is so sick!

Are your land and housing rights being violated because of discriminatory practices?
You agreed to get married before the village chief. Now you have to live according to our tradition and customs!

Even if we split up I have the right to get something for taking care of this house!

Do you know how to protect yourself?

Are you being discriminated against because of you HIV status?

Do you know where to go if you think your land and housing rights are being violated?

The LCC can guide you through the land titles’ issuance procedure and can provide mediation services to help solve land disputes, regardless of your HIV status.

Your marital situation can jeopardize your land and housing rights if trouble should arise.
